Senior Hank Leslie courageously steps away from the goal to stop the Falcons from raising their score and securing the "W". With a strong arm and powerful kick, Hank launched the ball to mid-fielders anxiously awaiting its arrival.

Just for Kicks

“I think about what I did at practice and then keep that in mind.”

-Christian Riley

“I just think positive throughout the game, and it keeps me concentrated.”

-Chambers McClay

“I keep focused on what Coach Havens is saying.”

-Emille Mills

“I get focused by listening to music before the game, and I just stay concentrated after that.”

-Christian Smalley

How do you keep your concentration during the game?

Mark Moore aggressively stretches his body to reach above the vicious opposing team for an outstanding header. Mark felt confident making these bold plays because he had the support of his team behind him. "It hurts pretty bad to head-butt the ball, but during a game you don't think you just react," said Mark.

Conquering the

Course

On the silky, fresh cut grass of the Elks Country Club Golf Course, Nathan Monroe tries to "drain" the ball with a light, but firm, putt. "I really like playing on the Elks course because it is extremely clean and well kept," says Nathan.

Cross Country runner, Nathan Fairchild, pushes himself to overcome the other runners using all possible leg energy left. Nathan loved to run because it was his way to escape stress and unwind.

At the annual Shawnee Bear run, Emille Mills sweats it out on the 5K course, diligently trying to end with a win. Emille ran her way to the regional cross country meet where she accomplished her personal goal of going further than the regular season schedule.

During an intense game against West, Junior Varsity player, Alexis Gambill sets the ball up for Katie Moore to spike it down. Alexis' favorite position to set is the outside because the outside hitter is the strongest attacker.

Rachel Moos and Alisha Riley are above the net in a blink of an eye in attempt to block against the Clay Panthers. Having both of these forceful girls in the game made opponents think twice about swinging.

In order to prevent injury, Carson Seaman takes the time before practice to make sure his pads are tight and secure. An inside peek revealed that the football players do much more in the locker room before practice than just put on their pads.

With a vigorous leap Kenny Crabtree receives the spiraled pass from quarterback Jimmy Pack as the East defender tries to stop the play short. Kenny's aggressive attitude was appreciated on the field when he tried to score every chance he could.

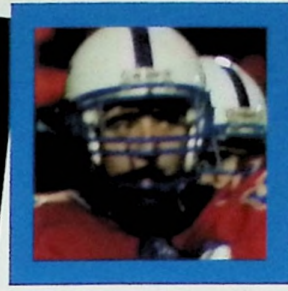

Being best buds, Hank Leslie, Jared McCar, Luke Gray, and Chaise Hall show off their incredible "stunts" expressing their high hopes for a victory against the Manchester Greyhounds. Although the boys were faithful Mobawk fans, they were unable to paint their chests for other games due to the chilly autumn weather.

Varsity player, Taylor Horsley, shows his tremendous amount of strength by pushing through the Fairfield defense. "It was difficult to get through some of the other teams lines, but with my all-star skills I could make it through," laughed Horsley. With his tremendous attitude and character, Taylor was an essential part of the team. He was a leader on and off the field.

Football cheerleaders finish a favored cheer, "We Want a Victory" to try to raise the team's spirit. The cheer soon became a reality when the Mohawks defeated the Manchester Greyhounds, reaching their first win of the season. Winning this game was an outstanding way to end the cheerleader's last weeks of rooting on their favorite football team.

Snoozing Spirit

Who are the real sleeping cheerleaders?

B, C, and E

Freshmen, Mackenzie Horsley and Brooke Travis, hop into the "goat on a mountain" position while playing "Lovers Leap" during summer cheer camp. The girls played this game to break from their hectic week of learning many new dances,

Senior, Lacie Crabtree, leads the Junior Varsity cheerleaders into a spirit pumping crowd cheer during an intense game against Wheelersburg. When they begin these chants, the Varsity squad jumps out of their seats to help their fellow cheerleaders raise everyone's adrenaline.

We Want A Victory
Go Mohawks Go!

“I love to do aerials because they are unique.”

-Katie Malone

“I like to show spirit fingers and jump up and down.”

-Rachel Wolfenbarger

“I like to do handsprings and cheer the boys on.”

-Kori Smith

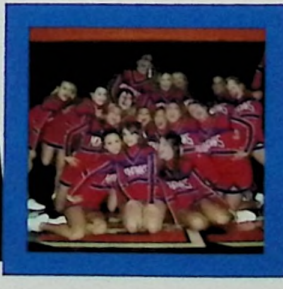

“I show a number one, and I sometimes do a toe-touch.”

-Savannah Burchett

What do you do when the boys score?

During a Varsity game's half-time, the cheerleaders display their repeatedly practiced dance to entertain their energetic fans. The squad added many practices to their schedule perfecting this dance for their "Cheer for a Cure" competition. "It was really important to put in the extra practices because we entered the competition as a dance team instead of a cheerleading squad, and we wanted to make sure we didn't have a disadvantage," explained junior, Brittany Breech.

Defending against the opposing Wheelerburg Pirate, Junior Varsity player, Tyler Vastine, pushes his speed in order to keep the offense from making a break and driving the ball to the basket. Tyler always watched the opposing team closely to make sure they didn't race past him to score points.

During the district semi-finals at Ohio University, senior, Hank Leslie, soars above the opposing Zane Trace player while going up under the basket for a shot. Prior to this game the boys traveled to Shawnee State University to practice on an actual college court so the extra 10 feet in length didn't affect the players. "Practicing on the longer court helped our agility," explained Jeremy Blankenship.

While at the Ohio University Convocation Center, the Varsity players prepare themselves for the game while sitting in the Bobcats' accommodated locker room. The boys used this time to kick back and relax before the biggest game of their season. This game was a very important game, not only for the boys, but also the school because it was the first time in ten years the team won the sectional finals and advanced to the Convo.

Sophomores Kyle Hall, Josh Bro, Amy Crabtree, and Heath Tipton wait for their Spanish word to be announced so they can run to another chair, before all the chairs are taken. This ever-so-popular game, 'The Violent Game', is an ongoing activity Ms. Bloomer loves to play with the students so they are well prepared for the next chapter.

"Head, Shoulders, Knees, and Toes." This old fashion sing-along is the technique Ms. Bloomer uses every year for the Spanish III class as they learn to point out each body part in Spanish. Kenzee Hackworth, Victoria Kratzer, KayLee Ross, and Katie Miller, gather the courage to stand in front of the class and showcase what they have learned from the song. As they hear the word "barbilla", the girls confidently point to their eyelashes and carefully listen for the next body part. After viewing this lovely demonstration, the other Spanish learners were confident enough to do the same. Each group had to perform this song, but with different words. Having fun was always present during Ms. Bloomer's classes as the students laughed and had a great time learning. The "Head, Shoulders, Knees, and Toes" song will forever stay in the minds of the Spanish III students for the days and days of practice embedded the knowledge, so they would remember it for a lifetime.

Before gym class, Mrs. Bayes gathers her students to teach the rules of dodgeball. Anxious to start the game, the students listened attentively to the instructions. "Dodgeball is one of my favorite games. Everyone gets into it!" exclaimed freshman Melanie Smalley.

"Up, one; up, two; up." Just hearing these infamous words from Coach Spears immediately brings sweat to anyone's brow. Despite what some may assume, the students in Athletic PE believe the most strenuous step of a push-up is the challenge of keeping their arms locked until Spears commands them down. Anxiously waiting for the magical word, Kayla Griffith, C.J. Niziol, Dylan Brown, and Kyle Moore hold their ground, even after an intense workout day. While these four athletes challenged themselves to reach many personal goals, they managed to be some of the most hardworking students throughout every exhausting semester. Endless Possibilities

Incorporating projects to get students moving and thinking in abstract ways.

"I found the Holy Grail!" During Ms. Weaver's British Literature class, students acted out the scenes of "From Morte d' Arthur", which took place during The Medieval Age. Merlin, played by Dean Whitt, cowers as the almighty and powerful King Arthur, played by Brooke Moore comes to his defense. The class took turns acting out different scenes from the story in a "freeze frame" format. The freeze frames helped students to understand the plot more thoroughly and gave the students the opportunity to have a visual storyboard in the classroom. Ms. Weaver's unorthodox teaching style allowed her students to use their creativity during the learning process. Her students were incredibly thankful to stray away from traditional bookwork. "I was telling some people who were chasing Dean to leave because they were going to hurt him", says Brooke of her scene.

With some free time on his hands, Justin Cullum takes an opportunity to create some free-handed drawings of his own. Justin demonstrated his creative side by drawing what he thought a dog and a cat would look like if morphed together.

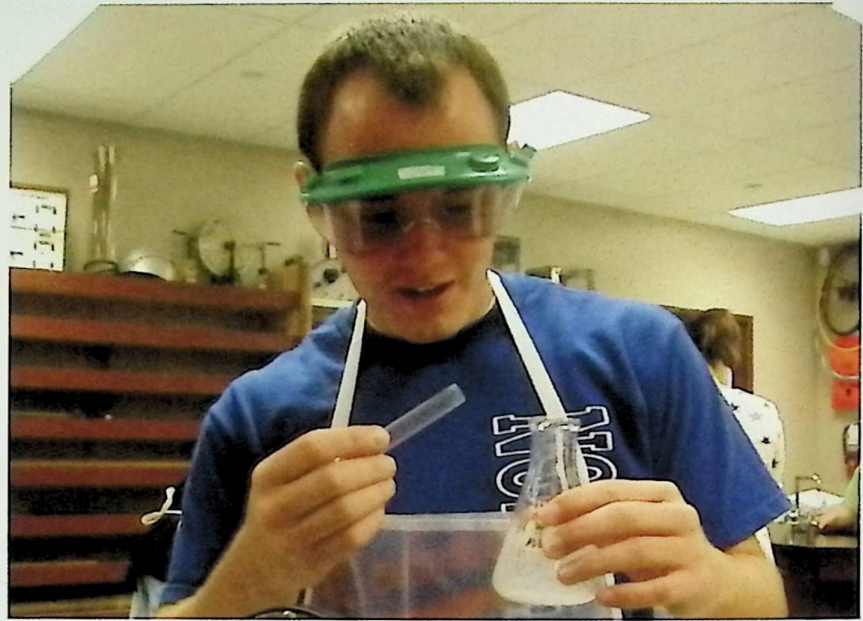

'Mr. Enz gave us the assignment to do a painting of ourselves using the grid method and I thought what would be better than a painting of one of me, two of me,' says Emily Hamblin. Although this complex style is seemingly impossible, it is actually much easier than to draw free handed. First, you take the picture you desire to draw and make a straight lined grid upon it. Then, you make the same grid over your canvas or paper and paint within the squares what you see in the corresponding spaces on the picture. Art II student, Emily seems to have this technique mastered as she is finishing her painting of herself looking in the mirror. As one can see, the resemblance between Emily and her painting are uncanny and amazed several admirers.

Scientific Endeavors

Discovering new ideas and engaging in rewarding investigations

When thinking of dissection, some people imagine sharp tools or the rotten stench of lifeless animals, but after an in depth Anatomy & Physiology lab, Jenna

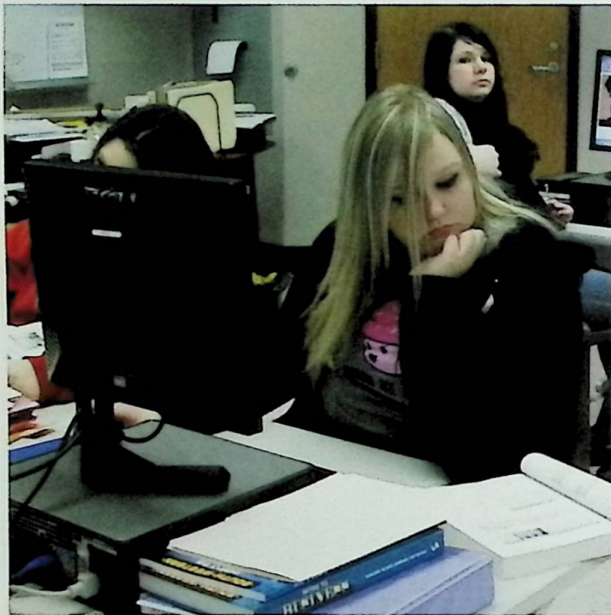

Euton, Alisha Riley, and Korina Crabtree believed differently. Despite the emotional rush regarding their cat Vidalia, they needed to get down to business. They began by scraping away the layers of skin called peritoneum and making the traditional "Y" cut. After doing so, they were to remove major organs and identify various veins and arteries. Next, would be chiseling away the skull to reach the detailed, glossy brain. Being juniors and taking this advanced science course was a daring decision since the class was filled with many fearless seniors. Following the vigorous tests, quizzes and work sheets, these striving ladies concluded this unit with A's.

Have you ever looked at the school's web page and wondered how does someone do it? While creating the web page is not all fun and games, it always appears creative and exciting as the Webmasters and Mrs. Moore put their time and effort into every page. Savanna Maguire concentrates as she crops pictures and creates a collage that will be used for the prom link on the web page. Along with cropping the pictures, the Webmasters also take out the "red eyes" in pictures and level the photos to make them more clear. Using Dream Weaver to correct the needed pictures is not the only time consuming action the students endure. They also take time out of their own schedules to take pictures at sporting events and extracurricular activities. So, the next time you are on the web you can appreciate the work the students, along with Mrs. Moore, have done to make our school web pages perfect.

Hailey Layne delicately flosses "Timmy's" teeth in an attempt to remove all the excess plaque. Timmy is one of many mannequins the dental students use to practice dental procedures. The mannequins gave students plenty of real life practice because not only did they look like real people, they had real teeth too.

During a handcuffing demonstration Jennifer Hackworth combatively conquers Luke McGlone in an attempt to show off her recently learned "take down" skills. Not only did the Criminal Justice class practice attacking and cuffing "vicious criminals," but they also work out every week.

With much precision, JJ. Spencer cuts an angle in his board in order to receive an outstanding grade in his Carpentry class. The instructor assigned the students various angles to cut, so they could be skillful carpenters.

A Change in Scenery

Making the drastic transformation from classroom to work field.

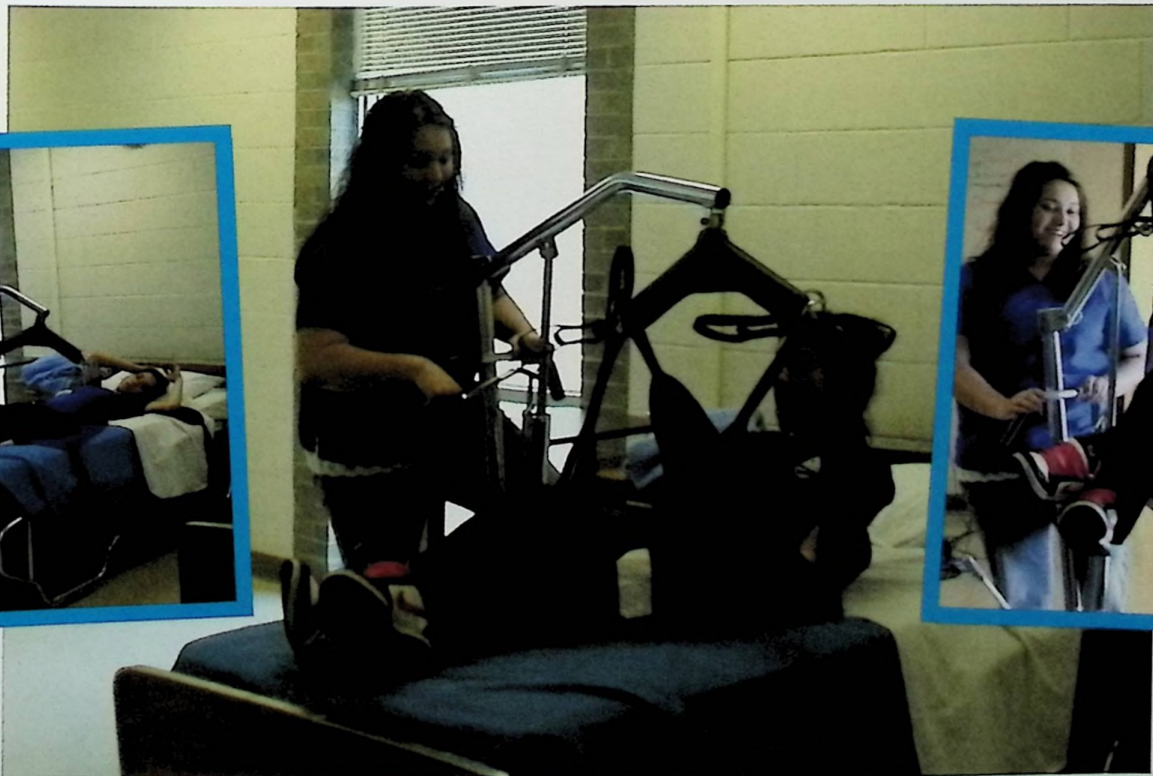

In the Allied Health program, students were required to learn how to use a lift. These lifts are needed when a patient is paralyzed or is obese. Wearing their royal blue Scioto County Career and Technical Center shirts, Denise Arguello and Destinie Thomas were both chosen to participate in the lift demonstration. Denise lay on top of the lift holder, and Destinie cranked it up until her patient was up and off the bed. This skill will come in handy as both girls plan to pursue a career in the allied health profession.

Making A Difference

Not only improving their education, but making a difference in other student's lives.

After gaining the attention of her third graders, Katie Malone quizzes them with multiplication flash cards. Katie was an intern for Mrs. Lutz and did not limit herself only to grading papers. She also taught cursive writing, long division and English.

Juniors Tiffany Hoffer and Jasmine Gilley sit quietly as they listen and help Harley, a "TQ Smartie", read her book after the class Easter activity. The ladies were given the chance to fill and hide Easter eggs for Mrs. Schuyler's annual Easter egg hunt. This event was much anticipated by the peer listeners because they enjoyed seeing the children play and interact. After an early morning arrival to Mrs. Schuyler's classroom, Tiffany and Jasmine grabbed the Easter eggs and went outside to hide them in the trickiest spots possible. After doing so, they gathered their students and stood on the sidewalk to await Mrs. Schuyler's instructions. As the students raced toward the first eggs they saw, the peer listeners heard their excited squeals and humorous giggles. Every moment created during Peer Listening is cherished and treasured, for the children's joyous, smiling faces could bring anyone's bad day a new start.

Life Experiences

Experiencing and learning life's many adventures and phenomenons.

Mrs. Kitts' class received the call to help out Kirby's flower shop, and they readily accepted. The flower shop wanted the students to fill the aquapics for preparation for the upcoming holiday. Jonathan O' Bryant and Joey Sutherland consistently push the rose holders into the styrofoam board, while AJ Cassity, Ashley Collier, and Mrs. Schackart fill up the tubes with water creating an assembly line. "Being able to fill the aquapics was awesome!", exclaimed Jonathon. After filling and stabilizing the tubes in the board, the students sent them off to Kirby's to remain healthy. The Friday before Valentine's Day, the students got to experience the hectic schedule flower shops go through during the holidays. They learned how to figure up change, and they witnessed the creation of many beautiful bouquets and other flower arrangements. This was one of many educational and exciting field trips Mrs. Kitts' students, had an opportunity to experience.

During the annual October game against the Waverly Tigers, the Marching Mohawks take the field to perform and to show off their unique and wild Halloween costumes. It has become a tradition for the band to dress up for the game closest to this spooky holiday. Although they enjoy their one chance to be creative, when it comes to competition, attitudes are much more serious. Performing during halftime at each football game was not only for entertaining the crowd but also practice for the band as they specifically prepared themselves for local and national competitions. It has been a seventeen year tradition for the Marching Mohawks to reach state each year and to always perform to the best of their ability.

On Wednesday December 16, 2009, the first semester chorus class held their annual Christmas concert in the high school gymnasium. Ms. Bloomer agreed to be the accompanist for the event which allowed Mr. Colegrove the opportunity to devote his full attention to conducting his attentive followers. A few days before the concert the two classes were given the chance to sing together for the first time. Although both class blocks had practiced individually, they now had a chance to hear what the finished product would sound like. On the evening of December 16, while wearing the mandatory black and white clothing, the joined voices treated the crowd to a spectacular performance.

After about a half an hour of preparation and another half an hour in the oven, Jimmy Cullum calls over Eric Hurst in order to show off his almost completed frittata. Even though these fellow seniors were friends, they were competitive in the Transition to College class. They often compared each other's food to see which was better. In this case Jimmy won the frittata competition. "I guess I have to give it to Jimmy this time, I accidentally added too much olive oil and mine was actually very runny," confesses Eric. Frittata's are Italian omelets that are baked and not folded. The class added various meats and vegetables to customize their frittata so it meets their taste buds' criteria. After completing this dish, the groups sat down and feasted on their new creations. Jimmy may have won this time, but Eric is determined to beat him during the next cooking challenge.

A Dream Come True

River Days Queen, Julie Seaman stands with the 2010 Northwest River Days representative, Chelsea Howard after pinning on her sash. The 2010 contestants are all chosen during the winter, and Julie will continue her rein by helping out with her "sister group" during various community events.

Before the River Days Parade Miss Northwest, Julie Seaman reenacts a famous scene from the movie Titanic with her fellow senior cheerleaders. Consumed with the lively theme of Mardi-Gras, Julie's Bourbon Street float took home the title of "Best Overall", giving her victorious day a terrific start. Following the parade, the candidates went on to the Vern Rife Center, where the pageant was held. Once there they modeled evening gowns, performed physical fitness routines, and presented their platforms. Julie chose the admirable platform of Breast Cancer Awareness, allowing her to sport a charming pink ribbon during her speech. To promote her platform, she held an informing yet exciting fundraiser at the SOMC Cancer Center over the summer. After a summer full of sweat, tears and much needed Mountain Dew, Julie won the title of "Miss River Days 2009", making her the second, first place title holder in the history of Northwest. Julie agrees that it was definitely "a dream come true".

As a representation of the River Days Festival, Julie went on to compete in the Miss Ohio Teen pageant. There she placed in the top 15 of nearly 40 experienced contestants in this challenging contest.

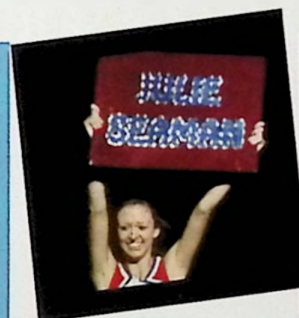

Football cheerleaders, Superintendent Mr. Todd Jenkins, and River Days Winner Julie Seaman gather by her Bourbon Street float before the parade to celebrate a job well done. Mr. Jenkins helped Julie tremendously throughout the summer by not only working endless nights on the float with her dad but also by supporting her at the pageant along with his wife and daughter.

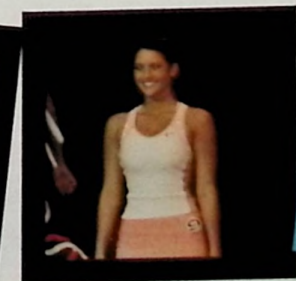

Overwhelmed with joy, Julie Seaman shows off her "Best Overall" trophy. "During the float interview, I was very nervous. But when they brought me my trophy, I was filled with pure bliss", says Julie.

Seniors Kenzee Hackworth and Katie Miller dance along with other cheerleaders to promote our candidate for a win. The girls each had a chance to bring their section to its feet and to determine which one was the loudest. Needless to say, Julie's crowd dominated over all other fans.

Bing, Bang, Boom. Goodbye 2009, hello 2010! This lively group of friends rang in the new year at Ashley Gilley's New Year's Bash. Most of the party goes return annually, but there are always a few newcomers who are initiated the first night. Every time an initiation occurs, the girl is sworn to secrecy so the surprise is not ruined for another's first time attending. Next on the agenda is for everyone to create their own hat to wear as they watch the ball drop. Using everything from construction paper to straws, the end products are definitely one of a kind. When the clock strikes twelve, the guests rush outside to the porch with pots and pans in hand, ready to make as much noise as they can. Afterwards, the party moves back inside where the girls occupy themselves with everything from telling stories to playing board games. At three in the morning the girls have their traditional bowl of ice cream, which is usually coated in chocolate syrup and caramel. Finally, after a long night, the girls drift off to sleep one by one, but they know they will soon awake to the smell of the delicious breakfast buffet waiting in the kitchen.

Bruce Grever shoves the final marshmallow into his cheeks pushing his maximum capacity during the Chubby Bunny Contest. This get-together was an annual celebratory conclusion to the summer band camp.

Collin LaJoye and Jeremy Blankenship anxiously await for the departure of "The Slingshot". The ride threw the boys straight up in the air and back down again numerous times, all the while it kept them spinning around and around in the humongous ball. On the third day of school, the juniors who passed all five parts of the OGT the previous year were rewarded with an adventurous trip to King's Island. The achievers spent the beautiful day riding every ride they possibly could, as the park was nearly empty and the lines were shorter than ever. After being presented with this reward, the students were motivated to perform their best on the tests. The students had exceptional scores on the OGT, allowing this incentive to continue for the next class.

A group of high spirited students show their support for the boy's basketball team during the Wheelersburg game. While awaiting the departure of their bus to take them to their first away game of the season, the girl's basketball team creatively designed shirts to spell out MOHAWKS. The girls planned to wear their shirts to all of the boys' games they attended. Both the boys' and girls' basketball teams were very supportive of each other, and each attempted to make an appearance at every game. Most of the time, their games were on different days of the week, and they were there to show their support with hopes of leaving with another victory.

A Night To Remember

Sophomore attendant, Alexis Gambill, shows her rebellious nature as her mom tells her to smile pretty for the camera. "Taking my mom along always makes for a fun time" says Alexis.

Football Homecoming Queen KayLee Ross is escorted across the field by fellow classmates Corey Patrick, Tyson Brown, Kreig Crabtree, and Taylor Horsley. Although the preparation required countless hours and hard work the night was definitely picture perfect. The queen, along with the rest of the court, had the luxury of getting out of school early to get their hair, nails and makeup looking perfect. It was crucial for the girls to dismiss themselves early for they needed to arrive at the high school three hours prior to kick off. To some, this may seem a bit much, but those hours full of posing, primping and preparing flew by for the attendants. One by one the girls entered onto the football field in their flashy convertibles rather than the traditional horse and buggy. With spirits high, the team fed off the positive energy earning their second win of the season. Even though the game came to an end, the students celebration did not as they congregated to boogey-down in the decorated cafeteria and finally complete everyone's night to remember.

Senior football player, Cory Patrick, crowns KayLee Ross in front of a football stadium full of eager fans. Although he was a bit nervous, the crowning of the queen was a success.

Homecoming Queen KayLee Ross cherishes the moment with her fellow court members. "The best part of the whole homecoming experience was standing on the 50 yard line after I was crowned queen", says KayLee.

Emily Hamblin and Destinie Thomas, wait for their chauffeur to ferry them off to the ceremony. Despite their nerves on the inside, the girls wore smiles as they took their turn walking down the fifty yard line.

Gary Parks hands the scepter to senior football player Kreig Crabtree, who proceeds to present it to the queen. Being KayLee's cousin really paid off for Kreig as he played a large role in her special night.

Derrick Ellis rips through the spirit banner, leading the football team onto the freshly painted field. After 48 long minutes of intense football against Fairfield Christian Academy, the Mohawks came out on top.

Prior to the ceremony Queen Ashley Gilley received a congratulating gift from a family friend. Ashley was ecstatic to get another Willow Tree angel to add to her collection.

Homecoming queen, Ashley Gilley, jumps her highest in hopes of reaching the ball before her escort, and boyfriend, Chaise Hall. The girls came up with the idea of a challenging "Attendants vs. Escorts" basketball game after snapping their beautiful homecoming pictures. On January 22, 2010, the festivities began when the girls left school to get their toes French manicured, and their nails painted with crystal clear polish, making them feel like true royalty. For the game, Ashley reserved a section of seats for her court to relax and cheer on the boys. "I feel that it was very important to spend quality time with one another and grow closer to each other", says Ashley.

Junior and freshman attendants Laura Fitzpatrick and Katie Moore grow impatient while the stylists finish their hair creations. Although it was a long, boring wait, the girls were very satisfied with the outcome.

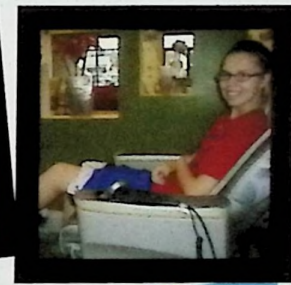

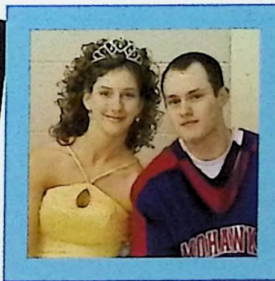

The homecoming court pauses from a chaotic moment to snap a quick and memorable photo. Although the week had brought many to a crazed, anxious state, the court agreed the end result was well worth the trouble. Homecoming was not simply for Ashley and her crown, but for thousands of lifetime memories, all made with friends.

Despite Amber Montavon's nerves and C.J. Nizio's fatigue, the two sophomores strut with pride down the half-court line after the defeat of the J.V. Pirates. With this win on the brain, they were all smiles for the bright flashing cameras.

Freshman attendant Katie Moore climbs up the much needed ladder to tie another balloon to the decorative cloud. Preventing a sudden fall and injury, Ashley Gilley stands by for Katie's protection and instructs on the addition's placement.

Dance The Night Away

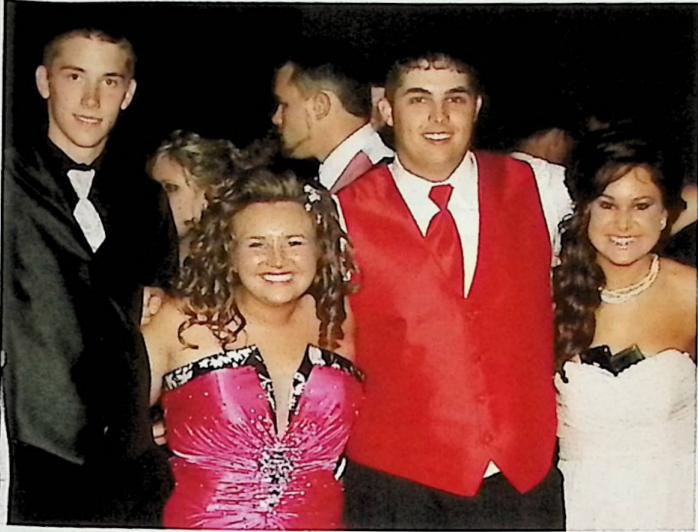

Senior Miranda Breech begins the initial painting on one of the treasure chest decorations for prom. Two days before prom, a few of the seniors were excused from classes to decorate the gymnasium for the big night.

Senior Ethan Preston challenges junior Jeremy Blankenship to a "dance off" while all of their fellow classmates watch in amusement. Before the song ended, Jeremy walked away with his head held high as he congratulated Ethan for beating him fair and square. Ethan continued to entertain everyone throughout the evening with his unusual dance steps. Despite the different kinds of music the D.J. decided to play, the students filled the dance floor and danced the night away.

Senior Aaron Cline and date Michelle Hammonds walk hand in hand, gracefully down the aisle at Grand March. Putting their nerves aside, each couple walked down the beautifully lit walkway before taking a seat on either side of the gymnasium floor.

Seniors, Mark Moore, Emily Hamblin, Cory Miller, and Madison Spears embrace each other in one final photo before the clock strikes twelve. Following prom, everyone changed from their formal wear into something more suitable for the after prom activities, which included playing poker and riding the mechanical bull.

KayLee Ross and Katie Miller leave their worries behind as they move energetically to one of the crowd favorite "The Cha Cha" Slide. The two friends provided honest insight when they shopped together for their dresses at The Ritz.

Senior Eric Hurst holds an umbrella to cover his date, Caitlin Fannin's hair. After waiting hours for her hair stylist to complete her elegant up-do, Caitlin was bound and determined not to let the rain ruin it.

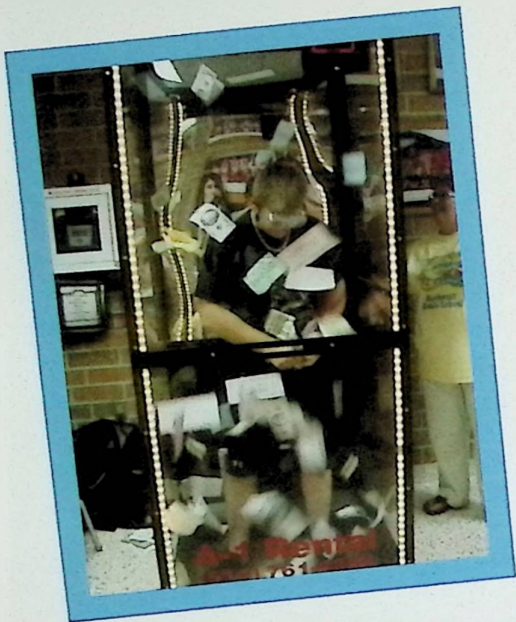

While dining at Shawnee Lodge, Julie Seaman and Taylor Horsley anticipate the first delicious taste of their French onion soup. The couple was accompanied by Ashley Gilley, Chaise Hall, Tiffany Conley, Kreig Crabtree, Kassie Hammonds, Hank Leslie, Tosha Branton, and Eric Frantz.

Tyler Jordan scrambles to grab as much cash as possible from the money machine within the set time restraints. Throughout the night, several randomly chosen seniors were granted an opportunity to try their luck in the money machine.

The senior class joins hands one last time while TLC's emotional song "Graduation" echoes throughout the dance floor. This tradition involves singing, gently swaying, and even a little crying. The theme, "Treasure the Night" was more than appropriate here; however, in the early stages it was questioned by a handful of students. Their vision of prom was a bit more gruesome as they hoped the theme "300" would be carried out. To avoid any conflict, seniors were given the opportunity to vote on their favorite theme. Democracy ruled when "Treasure the Night" was selected. Subsequently, various decorations allowed for the gym to be transformed into a magical paradise. Ceiling to floor gossamer, glittering treasure chests, twinkling lights, and Arabian tents mesmerized all who were granted access to this surreal kingdom.

Cory Patrick concentrates on conquering his vicious mechanical opponent: "The Bull". Cory was victorious in his well-fought battle and received a cash prize of twenty dollars for staying saddled the longest.

Paden Richard, Evan Smith, David Shepherd, Amanda Tolle, and Zack Taylor
 Everyone loved the attention and the compliments they received for their attractive attire throughout the entire evening. Even though so much time and money was spent for one night, it turned out to be more than worth it in the end.

Kaytlyn Wright and Jimmy Cullum stand outside the school creating a statement in their formal wear. Later the two ate at B-Dubs.

Taylor Hardy uniquely accessorizes her ensemble with a borrowed tie from date, Jordan Nichols. After hours of dancing, the couple along with Caitlin Fannin and Katy Phipps tirelessly played Wii until 6:00 AM.

Aaron Cline and Molly Bender sign a graduation robe in remembrance of Jordan Dunham. Jordan's robe remained on the stage throughout the commencement ceremony as a symbol of his importance to the graduating class.

Chelsi Wilson, Lacie Crabtree, Taylor Hardy, Julie Seaman, Eric Frantz, Hank Lesley, and Taylor Horsley stand outside of the Huntington Art Museum. WSAZ honored area valedictorians with a luncheon and an appearance on channel 3.

Ethan Preston, Suzi Musholt, Cory Patrick, Matraca Montavon, Cory Miller, and Jessica McClary wait for the cue from Mr. Amburgy before moving into the courtyard as "Pomp and Circumstance" begins.

Capturing every move of his fellow classmates, Ryan Weakley productively spends the two hour wait prior to graduation with his video camera. Ryan used collected student interviews for the Wilson and Weakley video, "A Day in the Life of a Northwest Mohawk".

Mr. Havens and Mr. Jenkins present Matraca Montavon with the Sean Miller Memorial Scholarship. Eric Frantz was also a recipient of this scholarship given by Ray and Delores Miller in honor of their son, a 2006 graduate.

Michael Brown receives the traditional "fake diploma" from Mr. Scarberry. This imposter held a simple quote. Immediately following the ceremony, students rushed to the Media Center to obtain their authentic diploma.

With her own graduation cap successfully pinned, Christine Emmons meticulously adjusts Brittany Ellis' cap to the perfect angle. Christine and Brittany were voted by the senior class as "inseparable Friends" in the senior superlative poll.

While onlookers use cameras to document this highly anticipated day, Cory Prose parades down the center aisle. Later, his family surprised him with a mini putt-putt golf course as entertainment for his graduation party.

Following the invocation, Shawna Gleason and Katie Malone lead friends, family, and faculty in the Pledge of Allegiance. The two were selected due to their vice president and secretary positions.

Lacie,
 You are a beautiful baby, a beautiful and special young lady, and a wonderful blessing. We are very proud of you and love you very much. Congratulations.

Love,
 Mom and Erica

The moment I first saw you,
 You were so little then,
 Sometimes I can't help but wish,
 You were little once again.
 Black hair with tiny curls,
 And big brown smiling eyes.
 The love that grew was instant,
 It was nothing I could disguise.
 You began to walk and talk,
 And push my hand away.
 It was then that I realized,
 You would be a man someday.
 We've struggled and we've fought,
 Side by side we have overcome.
 There is nothing that can break,
 This mother's love for her son.

Love,
 Mom, Papaw,
 Mamaw Judy

I'm filled with mixed emotions,
 As I hold back all the tears.
 And, with much pride remember,
 Back so many years.
 When I first held you in my arms,
 If only I'd have known,
 The years would feel like moments.
 After you had grown,
 I surely would have tried,
 To slow the passing of time,
 So I could have more moments with,
 That little boy of mine.
 You aren't a child, but in my eyes,
 I guess you'll always be,
 That baby boy who changed my life.
