The diplomas were handed out, after an address to those listening, and the Seniors wandered off to family and friends. The hats went up as a final gesture and the band played, and the Seniors were gone. What they learned will never be tested until somebody asks the right questions. What are you going to do now? I have no doubt that they will have a good, strong, resounding answer. I wish you all that you will accept responsibility to work towards.

Seniors:

What's the deal? A year full of jokes, laughs, good times, bad moments, all-around craziness and an unending number of snow days, water days, make-up days and the plain ole' school days. That they have yet to learn what they will become, they know; that the world will not wait, they know; that no matter what happens, it will pass and they will have grown, they know; that they will be missed, maybe they know; ... maybe they know ...
